United Arab Emirates University

The United Arab Emirates University (UAEU) was founded in 1976 by the late Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan Al Nahyan, may he rest in peace. The University has evolved from an educational institution providing higher education to become a comprehensive research-focused university serving the national strategy in collaboration with its partners in the industrial sector, providing research-based solutions to the challenges facing the local and regional communities by focusing on scientific research.

The university comprises nine different colleges and nine research centers, as well as two virtual research institutes specializing in strategically important areas for the UAE and the region. These research centers work on advancing knowledge in crucial scientific fields.

The university also has distinguished faculty, including 900 faculty members and lecturers, along with over 20,000 students, including a diverse group of international students from 89 countries, contributing to cultural diversity and enriching campus life. UAEU features a modern and advanced campus, state-of-the-art central laboratories, and a comprehensive range of services to support students in an exceptional learning environment. As a result, the UAEU has become an advanced and prestigious university with a remarkable record of significant achievements and a clear path for development.

UAEU is a comprehensive research university, with over 79,000 graduates who hold prestigious positions in the government, industrial sectors, and various fields, representing a broad segment of the job market.

UAEU is ranked first locally in the Times Higher Education Young University Rankings and sixth in the Arab world, making it one of the top universities globally.
